History

The first inhabitants of the area were Native Americans of the Shoalwater Bay Tribe. During the 1700s, European explorers arrived in search of a Northwest Passage—a trade route connecting the Atlantic to the Pacific. In November 1805, Lewis and Clark's Corp of Discovery landed at what is now Cape Disappointment. Sitka spruce still jut from the shoreline where migrating wild fowl skirt igneous outcroppings and old growth forests. At the southern-most tip, the group of 33 men cut through the sandy isthmus and hiked up the shore to Long Beach. The Corp camped on the Washington side of the Columbia River in present-day Pacific County for 18 days. This opened the door for the first settlers who traveled west from the mid-section of the U.S. and Scandinavia, and began the area's timber and fishing industries. Today oysters, clams, crab, tuna, halibut, sturgeon, shrimp and salmon are still pulled from the sea by local fisherman and cranberry bogs fill the space between the two coasts. But the main industry is the hospitality accorded to the thousands of tourists that come to breathe the fresh air, walk the pristine beach and feast on the local cuisine.

Long Beach Peninsula

Located in the southern half of Pacific County, the Long Beach Peninsula sits 115 miles from Portland, Oregon and 165 miles from Seattle, Washington. It's an ideal destination for a weekend or a lifetime getaway from the hustle and bustle of big city life. It's great to be so close to the ocean and yet close to urban areas.

With a year-round population of only a few thousand people, one can walk the many trails and meandering paths, experiencing the wonderful feeling of isolation and closeness to natural beauty. On the other hand, there are fairs, festivals and year-round events to keep the socially-minded occupied. The beautiful scenery, unhurried pace and friendly residents make it an ideal place to live for people of all ages. Entrepreneurs and businesses looking to relocate find numerous advantages including lower operating costs due to low-cost energy and lower than average cost of living rates; state of the art infrastructure such as high-speed telecommunications and close proximity to the I-5 corridor as well as several ports; a strong collaborative business community; a stable workforce; affordable housing; a supply of commercial and light industrial zoned properties and a distinct Northwest quality of life that makes the peninsula an attractive place to live, work and play.

We enthusiastically present the lovely communities of Naselle, Chinook, Ilwaco, Seaview, Long Beach, Ocean Park, Surfside, Nahcotta and Oysterville—each a unique jewel of the peninsula.

Long Beach

A vibrant resort community, Long Beach bustles with year-round activity From beach fairs and festivals to quaint downtown shopping and restaurants, there's something for everyone. Every year on the fourth of July the community hosts the biggest fireworks display in the County.

Walking the main strip from Sid Snyder to Bolstad, it's not uncommon to hear the sound of children's laughter as they ride the merry-goround, bumper cars, Ferris wheel and go-carts.

Between the same avenues, raised above the grassy dunes, a half-mile boardwalk offers interpretive displays of the local flora and fauna, and superb views of sand and surf.

With pedestrian and bike friendly paths as well as up-to-date Internet and cable technology, Long Beach has excellent infrastructure to meet the needs of businesses, residents, and visitors. Featuring a unique coastal environment and rich cultural and natural heritage, the city strives to build a diverse economic base that provides a sound quality of life and safe place where residents can live, work, and play.

Ilwaco

Heading north on U.S. Highway 101, the land hooks west and south between the Pacific Ocean and Baker Bay, reaching a point where the west's largest river erupts in the world's largest ocean.

The scenery is truly dramatic with soaring basalt cliffs that stand in sharp contrast to the virtually flat land to the north. Ilwaco, once known as the salmon capitol of the world, offers moorage for private sport boats and charter fishing. A visit to the Heritage Museum in town is an opportunity to delve into the history of the area. The road continues to Cape Disappointment State Park covering approximately 6,000 acres of the very southern tip of Washington. This is a spectacular sight where the Columbia River meets the Pacific Ocean, creating some of the roughest waters in the world and setting the stage for the U.S. Coast Guard's world-renowned life boat training school. There are trails leading through dense forests with breathtaking views of Benson Beach, where many shipwrecks were recorded in the "Graveyard of the > Pacific." A sensational panoramic view of the area is available from the nearby Observation Room of the Lewis and Clark Interpretive Center as well as from both Cape Disappointment Lighthouse and North Head Lighthouse.

Seaview

Between Long Beach and Ilwaco where Hwy 101 meets Hwy 103 sits the historic town of Seaview. Founded in 1881 as a summer community that catered mostly to wealthy Portland families, early vacationers arrived by steamer, wagon and horseback, often bringing their household staff and stablemen with them. It's easy to return in time to those early years by viewing the many handsome 19th century homes and their gardens. Seaview > was once a depot on the Clamshell Railroad. That building still remains on 38th Street, the main beach approach, and is now an excellent restaurant,

The Depot, where visitors enjoy history and a fine

Ocean Park

Approximately ten miles north of Long Beach is Ocean Park, one of the larger unincorporated communities. Started in the 19th century as a Methodist Bible Camp, today it is the residential center of the peninsula. There are terrific restaurants and plenty of shops including two large grocery stores, a hardware store, pharmacy, galleries, gift shops, bookstore as well as many options for visitor lodging.

Host to it's own fourth of July festivities, in which Lighthouse Realty joins in the patriotic spirit by marching in the Old Fashioned 4th of July parade, Ocean Park is also well known for it's annual Garlic Festival and the "Rod Run to the End of the World," which draws thousands into the area each year. Razor clam season attracts many to the beach.

Just north of Ocean Park is Surfside, a beach community with a backyard of approximately three miles of Pacific Ocean. Amenities include several cabanas located on lakes and canals, walking bridges over waterways and trails to access the beach. Surfside boasts well-designed and landscaped homes that line the shore and rolling hillsides. There is a challenging golf course and a growing community.

Nahcotta and Oysterville

On the western shore of Willapa Bay is Nahcotta, home of the primary oyster port in south Pacific County. A great place to buy fresh or canned oysters and seafood at the oyster farm, there is also a dock where you can go crabbing and catch your own. An interesting visit to the Willapa Bay Interpretive Center will provide information about the history of the oyster industry. The center displays a 20-foot mural, old photographs and tools of the oystering trade. The Port of Peninsula in Nahcotta is available for moorage and scenic picnics.

On the inland side of the Long Beach Peninsula on the bank of Willapa Bay is the quiet little town of Oysterville. Full of beautiful old homes and a white picket-fenced church, it's history can be viewed by driving along Main Street and reading signs telling of it's past. Only three miles north is Leadbetter Point. This northernmost peninsula tip and wildlife refuge has many wonderful forest and beach > trails. Watch for at least 100 species of migratory and upland birds. Among them are Sanderlings, Yellowlegs, Knots, Snowy Plover and the Black Brandt, a sea goose migrating along the Pacific between Alaska and Mexico.

Chinook

Gateway to the Long Beach Peninsula from the Columbia River is the sleepy little village of Chinook. Once a prosperous community fishing town, large Chinook salmon were harvested by nets pulled onto the beach by horses. The old fishing traps are still visible along the shores. The town still has a small harbor primarily housing a charter fleet and a commercial shrimping, crabbing and salmon fishery. For an interesting tour, visit Fort Columbia State Park Museum where you can view historical military structures and actually go inside the bunkers. One of the largest businesses in the area is the Bell Buoy Crab Company, Inc.

Naselle

Nestled in the Willapa Hills and bordered by the Columbia River to the south and Willapa Bay to the west, Naselle is rich with history of Finnish immigrants who built farms, logged big timber and caught huge numbers of salmon.

The Appelo Archives Center provides a small local museum, 3,500 historic logging and farming photographs and a library of Pacific Northwest history, as well as a large Finnish language and Finnish to English book collection.

Various boat launches scattered throughout the area provide access to excellent fishing on the Columbia River as well as campsites, hiking trails and the Radar Ridge viewpoint with magnificent views of the Pacific Ocean, Astoria, the Oregon coast and the Columbia River. The surrounding lush forests are a favorite during hunting season, and the beautiful Naselle River provides a picturesque backdrop during the annual steelhead and trout fishing season.

Columbia Pacific Heritage Museum

Discover History! Located in the center of Ilwaco, WA the Columbia Pacific Heritage Museum is the place to explore the crossroads of history where the Columbia River meets the Pacific Ocean. Displays illustrate local history from the earliest times when the Chinook Indians thrived in this region to the settlement years when European immigrants made this peninsula a yearround home and profited from fishing, logging and tourism.

The Museum is home to the NAHCOTTA, a Pullman built narrow gauge car that rolled along the Ilwaco Rail and Navigation Company's 27 miles of track from Ilwaco to Nahcotta. Since a tide table not a time table governed the railroad schedule this quirky narrow gauge railroad was called "The Irregular Rambling and Never-Get-There Railroad."

Port of Ilwaco

The Port of Ilwaco owns and operates an 800 slip recreational and commercial fishing marina, along with a boat ramp, boat hoist, a 50-ton travel lift and self-service boatyard. There are approximately 25 commercial, landbased tenants, comprised of six waterfront restaurants, three seafood markets, gift shops, galleries, book store and four charter fishing businesses. The port is also home to Jessie's Ilwaco Fish Co., the largest buyer of Albacore tuna in the United States. Jessie's also buys Dungeness crab and other fish. The Port of Ilwaco hosts numerous events across the year (see Calendar of Events) as well as the waterfront Saturday Market, every Saturday from May through September. There is always activity going on at the Port of Ilwaco.

Cape Disappointment State Park

Cape Disappointment, named in 1788 by British fur trader John Meares after his inability to locate the mouth of the Columbia River, is one of the state's most famous and popular parks. It features a 250-site campground, two miles of ocean beach, Canby, an abandoned coastal defense fort from 1852 to 1947.

Lighthouses

Many ships and thousands of people perished due to high waves and shifting sandbars in the are that has come to be known as the "Graveyard of the Pacific." The Cape Disappointment Lighthouse went into operation in 1856, the first in the Pacific Northwest. It sits on the tip of the cape and overlooks the Columbia River.

because ships traveling from the North couldn't see Cape D's light. So the North Head Lighthouse was built two miles north on the headland surrounded by the ocean. The 65-foot tall structure emits a beam that can be seen 17 miles out to sea.

Today, both lighthouses are functional and are operated by the U.S. Coast Guard.

Lewis and Clark Interpretive Center

Today the Lewis and Clark Interpretive Center stands high on the cliffs of Cape Disappointment State Park, 200 feet above the pounding Pacific surf. A series of mural-sized "timeline" panels guide visitors through the westward journey of the Lewis and Clark Expedition using sketches, paintings, photographs and the words of Corps members themselves. The center also features a short film presentation, a gift shop and a glassed-in observation deck with fabulous views of the river, headlands and sea. Additional displays focus on local maritime and military history.

Cranberries are as American as apple pie-even more so! Long before the Pilgrims arrived and Lewis and Clark's explored, Native Americans combined crushed cranberries with dried deer meat and melted fat to make pemmican—a nutritious food with long term storage capacity.

This is just one of the many interesting facts about the history of the cranberry as well as key phases of the industry from bog prep and planting to marketing cranberry products you'll learn while visiting the Cranberry Museum. Enjoy a self-guided walking tour of the bogs and stop in the gift shop for many unique cranberry products or tried and true cranberry recipes. www.cranberrymuseum.com

In honor of the commemoration of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, the combined vision and hard work of a consortium of cities and public agencies has been involved in construction of > Discovery Trail since the fall of 2002. The cities of Long Beach and Ilwaco, with the Washington State Parks and Recreation Commission, have used assistance from the Washington State National Guard, Air Guard and the Oregon National Guard to complete the trail, which Ilwaco to North Long Beach.

The Ilwaco section of the trail is markedly different from the beach trail. Here you go through forest groves and enjoy some wonderful view spots, including an overlook of Ford's Dry Lake/Holman Lake that is expansive and unique.

The Trail segment in Long Beach includes monuments that evoke the experiences of Corps members as they explored the coast. One is the 9-foot etched Basalt Monolith north of Bolstad Avenue, a Gray Whale skeleton at the south end of the Boardwalk, and Clark's Tree, a 19-foot bronze sculpture noting the most NW point the Corps reached on their journey. Look for the bronze marker of Captain Clark with a sturgeon, interpretive displays along the Long Beach Boardwalk, and a variety of metal sculptures, including bicycle racks shaped like fish and dancing dogs with litter bags. http://funbeach.com/local attractions/discovery-trail/

Willapa National Wildlife Refuge

Willapa National Wildlife Refuge is over 16,000 acres of tidelands, temperate rainforest, ocean beaches, and small streams. It also includes several rare remnants of old growth coastal cedar forest. The Refuge preserves habitat for spawning wild salmon, hundreds of thousands of migrating shorebirds, and threatened species such as the Snowy Plover and Marbled Murrelet. The Refuge is a great place to see what the Pacific Northwest looked like over 100 years ago.

The Refuge is located at the northern tip of the Long Beach Peninsula on Willapa Bay, one of the most pristine

The Refuge preserves a number of unique ecosystems including diverse salt marshes, rich tideflats, rain-drenched old growth forest, and dynamic coastal dunes.

Visitors to the refuge can enjoy viewing

a wide variety of wildlife, from spawning salmon in the Refuge's numerous streams, Roosevelt elk on Long Island, and the tens of thousands of migrating shorebirds that crowd the beaches at Leadbetter Point and tidal flats of Willapa Bay. www.fws.gov/willapa/recreation/recreation.html.
